++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Heavy rain and possible thunderstorms on Thursday.

Today:
A mostly dry albeit cloudy start. However, a band of rain spreading eastwards across the country through the morning and early afternoon, giving way to brighter showery weather later. Blustery winds, locally strong, particularly in coastal locations. Feeling cooler. Maximum temperature 20 deg C (68 deg F).

Tonight:
A largely cloudy evening and night for many, scattered heavy showers continuing overnight. Blustery winds ease inland through the afternoon but continue at coastal locations. A mild evening and night. Minimum temperature 12 deg C (54 deg F).

Friday:
Some bright spells but showers continue into the morning, increasing in intensity throughout the day, and potentially turning thundery. Blustery conditions, particularly along the coasts. Feeling humid. Maximum temperature 20 deg C (68 deg F).

Outlook for Saturday to Monday:
Sunny spells and showers into the weekend, potentially heavy and thundery on Saturday. Showers easing in intensity and frequency towards Monday. Breezy conditions continue and feeling rather cool throughout.
